SITUATION SUMMARY

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather of Concern

The National Hurricane Center has downgraded Hurricane Delores to a Tropical Storm and it will continue to weaken. The forecast still shows the system moving west-northwest and further off the Mexican Coast going into the weekend. This track is significant and could bring tropical moisture mainly into the southern half of the state late this weekend and into early next week, with the potential for flash flooding, mainly in the deserts of eastern San Bernardino County and the southern Sierra. Northern California could see some impacts from this, with some increased monsoonal moisture moving into the area, though this should be focused more toward the Sierras.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An upper level trough moving into the Great Basin will bring cooler temperatures today and increase marine stratus. A ridge building into the Pacific Northwest will keep winds light and stratus in place for Sunday. Next week an upper level trough will bring slightly cooler temperatures and showers inland with stratus at the coast.

Medford Weather:

Temperatures will ramp up today for inland areas west of the Cascades as a thermal trough moves inland, bringing afternoon readings to 10 degrees above normal. Temperatures will be cooler at the coast and near normal east of the Cascades today. In eastern Siskiyou and Modoc Counties, there is a slight chance of thunderstorms today with some remnant moisture and instability. On Sunday, more stability and favorable dynamics will prevent thunderstorms from entering the region. On Monday, weak upper troughing may produce drizzle at the coast during the morning. Moisture from Tropical Storm Dolores will create thunderstorm chances for Siskiyou and Modoc Counties Monday afternoon. A cooling trend will be in full swing Tuesday and Wednesday as a potent upper trough moves towards the region.

Reno Weather:

A low pressure system will move across the Great Basin and bring a chance of showers and thunderstorms this afternoon. By Sunday and Monday, an upper low off the West Coast will bring moisture northward and keep the threat for thunderstorms across the Sierra and western Nevada through midweek.

San Francisco Weather:

Slightly cooler weather is forecast for today as a weak upper trough develops across northern and central California. Moisture from Tropical Storm Dolores off the coast of Mexico is forecast to move north through the weekend. This tropical moisture may result in scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms across the southern part of the region from late tonight through Monday evening. Humid conditions are expected Sunday and Monday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Very warm temperatures continue this weekend, with gradual cooling next week. Moisture from Tropical System Dolores will bring a chance of showers Sunday to Tuesday, mainly in the mountains.

Hanford Weather:

Sunny skies across the region this morning will give way to increasing cloudiness as tropical moisture arrives from the south. There will be a threat of showers and thunderstorms spreading north across the region later today and continuing over the weekend and into early next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Moisture from Tropical System Dolores and southerly flow will bring increased cloudiness and instability into the area Monday. Showers and thunderstorms are possible throughout the weekend. The best chances of showers and thunderstorms on Sunday night into Monday are from Ventura County and northward. Fair weather with coastal low clouds during the night and morning hours will return to the area for mid to late next week.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Tropical moisture will bring more clouds and a chance of showers and thunderstorms through Sunday with the greatest chances in the mountains and deserts during the afternoon and early evening each day. A slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms will continue into Monday for the mountains and deserts. For Tuesday through Friday, a weak trough of low pressure near the West Coast will bring drying and a return of the marine layer with night and morning coastal low clouds and patchy fog.

Southeast California Weather:

Showers and thunderstorms will become more common across the region through the weekend as tropical moisture associated with Tropical Storm Dolores moves into the Desert Southwest. This will also result in cloudy skies and below normal temperatures this weekend. Somewhat drier air will move into the region early next week with a return to typical monsoon conditions.
